ROBERT MEEK, EMERGENCY APPLICATIONS ATTORNEY

Supreme Court of the United States

One First Street, N.E.

Washington, D.C. 20543

cc: The Honorable Scott Harris, Clerk of the Court

RE: COPELAND V. TARRANT COUNTY, TEXAS, ET AL.

EMERGENCY APPLICATION FOR AN INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL
FIFTH CIRCUIT NO. 26-10389

DEAR MR. MEEK AND MR. HARRIS,

Enclosed for filing is Applicant Kathryn Copeland's Emergency Application for an Injunction Pending Appeal, addressed to Justice Alito as Circuit Justice for the Fifth Circuit, together with the accompanying appendix and proof of service.

The Fifth Circuit appeal remains pending. Applicant does not seek certiorari before judgment, does not ask this Court to review any custody or state-law merits determination, and does not ask this Court to direct how any state judge should rule. The application seeks only temporary, process-based relief to prevent new compulsory deadlines, hearings, sanctions, or enforcement consequences from proceeding through the challenged inaccessible process before the Fifth Circuit can resolve the pending appeal.

The district court treated this case as a challenge to individual judicial accommodation rulings. It is not. Applicant challenges the absence of the entity-level process federal law requires before disabled court users are routed back to the very judges presiding over the proceedings. The requested injunction does not alter any state judgment or direct any adjudicative outcome. It preserves meaningful appellate review by preventing new compulsory proceedings or sanctions through a process whose accessibility is the question on appeal.

Applicant sought emergency relief in the Fifth Circuit. That relief was denied, but Judge Haynes twice indicated she “would grant temporarily and carry with the case for the merits panel to decide whether to maintain the injunction pending appeal.” App. 2a. The enclosed application asks this Court for the same narrow interim protection while the ordinary appellate process continues.

Applicant is proceeding pro se. Please advise promptly if any filing component requires correction or supplementation.

Respectfully submitted,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Kathryn Copeland". The script is cursive and fluid, with the first name and last name clearly distinguishable.
