Ms. Kathryn (Katie) Copeland

RE: Weinstein, et al v. Kathryn Copeland

Dear Ms. Copeland:

In response to your late night email of yesterday, I provide the following:

First- my October 3 correspondence did not say that you had rejected the cleaning/remediation of the personal property items, it specifically said:

“.... Additionally, as you are aware, you requested that no cleaning/remediation be performed on those items at this time – and as such, none has been. As you are also aware, you had made several comments, prior to the Reign Restoration pack up, that you wanted your personal property cleaned and as such, if you still would like this service performed, please advise and Reign Restoration will be notified that it can move forward with this (and this would be at no cost/expense as to you).”.

Next- in response to your inquiry and request for confirmation that the items removed by Reign have not been cleaned, or treated- as I said in the October 3, 2025 correspondence- they have not been. I have confirmed that with Reign. With respect to whether items were disposed of – I have been informed that the only items that were disposed of were the contents/items in the refrigerator. The refrigerator was cleared out before it was removed to Reign's storage facility. Reign has indicated that it did not see/recognize any type of medication in the refrigerator or freezer when clearing out the contents. With respect to the medications you assert were being stored in the refrigerator or freezer, please provide the specific name of each, the prescribing physician/healthcare provider, and the cost associated with same (and proof of payment).

Next- please refer to my October 3 correspondence regarding the personal property items which were packed and placed in the Reign Restoration storage facility and the ability to return same to you.

Next, as the emails I sent on Friday, on Saturday and on Sunday made clear, the items that were remaining in your apartment and which the Court ordered be removed and returned to you – were too many/extensive to send to your hotel and/or comfortably move into your hotel room (and as you know, you never provided a date/time for even the boxes of medications and the humidifier to be returned to you personally). Therefore, all of these boxes and items (to include the three flat screen televisions were moved into the storage unit at the apartment complex (which both I and the management staff emailed to you about on Sunday, providing the number of the unit, the location in Building 2 and instructing as to access of the key for this storage unit). With that said – these boxes and items can also be moved to Reign Restoration for storage, and cleaning (at the appropriate time) and, therefore, if you would like these boxes and other items moved there – please advise and Weinstein will incur the costs associated with the move and the costs associated with cleaning those items, at the appropriate time. Again, none of your property will be cleaned or treated at this time.

With respect to the “list” of various items, you sent on last night’s, late night email – please note that the list of the items which you consider to be medical and/or sentimental needs to be completed and provided to me, before Reign is instructed to unpack, sort through and locate your identified items (the Court did not order anything regarding “items needed soon” and/or or “personal items”- the order was confined to medical and sentimental) so that this can be efficiently accomplished. Additionally, while I appreciate your attempt to identify items by “page numbers” from filings my office made last week – please confirm that “filing” that you are using as a reference by which to identify page numbers – is the Plaintiffs’ Response to Defendant’s Emergency Application (it appears to me that it is this particular filing); please note - in reviewing that document and trying to locate certain items –some are not readily identifiable in the photographs, therefore, please circle the items and send me those pages – so that Reign has a clear understanding of what to locate and return. While I do not believe a bedside table is considered “medical assistive equipment” – I am not opposed to requesting this to be located by Reign, however, I am opposed to the list (once completed) far exceeding medical and/or sentimental items. The sooner you can provide the complete list, the sooner Reign can unpack, locate and make arrangements to return those located items to Weinstein (and then to you, assumedly at the hotel where you are currently staying – which will require a confirmed date/time that you can meet Weinstein staff in your hotel lobby to personally receive the items, and this will need to be scheduled prior to the day of the delivery-so as to have some clarity as to the logistics necessary to accomplish this task and the ability to organize and schedule personnel for the completion of delivery, accordingly).

Note: as before - all references to Weinstein bearing the cost or expense for any matter identified herein is not an admission of liability as to my clients and Weinstein reserves all rights and defenses (to include as to affirmative defenses and/or inferential rebuttal positions) in connection with this matter.

I appreciate your attention to these matters and look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Glynis L. Zavarelli
