Dear Mr. Hawthorne,

I am writing once more to preserve the issue before the ten-day period expires.

Respectfully, the filing-access question here requires judicial review. I do not believe the Clerk's Office or a local administrative judge can decide the legal question presented: whether Chapter 11 may be applied to prevent a pro se attorney from filing an original proceeding directly in the Supreme Court of Texas, particularly where the filing challenges the application of the prefiling restriction and seeks access to this Court or when the vexatious order itself is void ab initio.

Your May 29 email states that the Clerk's Office has accepted permission orders from the local administrative judge for the court to which the original proceeding relates. But that does not identify a statutory local administrative judge for this Supreme Court proceeding. It also does not resolve the neutrality problem where the apparent Tarrant County local administrative judge is a named defendant in related federal civil-rights litigation involving court-access issues.

I respectfully request that the Clerk's Office submit this filing-access issue to the Court or an appropriate judicial officer before dismissing or rejecting the filing. If the Clerk's Office will not do so, please confirm in writing whether the filing will be dismissed solely because I did not obtain permission from a local administrative judge who has not been identified as having authority over this Supreme Court proceeding.

Respectfully,

Kathryn "Katie" Copeland
